Historical Sketch.

Among the many popular educational institutions of our State, which are at once the pride of our people and the envy of less favored localities, few, if any, have enjoyed a larger share of public confidence than Gould's Academy. Located in a healthful and thriving village, and surrounded by picturesque scenery, its advantages for the moral and physical development of the student are unsurpassed. These advantages were early recognized, and the success of the school from its organization has been a source of gratification to those having its welfare in charge. Students have centered here from all parts of Maine and from other States, and not a few of the Cuban patriots, whose struggles for freedom won the admiration of the world, caught their first inspirations of liberty while residing among the hills of Oxford county, and pursuing their studies at Gould's Academy in Bethel.

The foundation of Gould's Academy was laid in 1835, when a few public-spirited citizens of Bethel formed an organization as trustees of the Bethel High School. A hall was fitted up for a school-room, and Dr. N. T. True was employed as principal. Encouraged by their success, the trustees re-organized, and obtained a charter for an Academy, which, by act of the Legislature, January 27, 1836, was incorporated as Bethel Academy. A building was erected, and Isaac Randall opened the first term of school, September 9, 1836. The institution was without funds, and depended wholly upon public patronage for support; but in 1842, Rev. Daniel Gould of Rumford made a bequest, since known as the Gould fund, on condition that the name be changed to Gould's Academy, which was done. A grant of a half-township of land was made in 1850; this was sold, and the proceeds were termed the State Fund.

Among other gifts to the Academy should be mentioned those of the citizens of Bethel, who, at different times during the early days, subscribed generous sums for the needs of the institution; and especially in 1882, when $1,123 was donated for the purpose of furnishing the new building. Under the General Law Relating to Academies, passed by the last Legislature, the Academy will receive $750 annually from the State, or $1,000 in case a Normal Course should be added to the curriculum.

The present Academy building was erected in 1881, and thoroughly repaired and renovated in 1898. It is pleasant, commodious, well lighted, heated and ventilated, in fact, fully adapted in every way to the purpose for which it was designed. Through the kindness of the Bethel Water Company, the building is supplied with pure water.

On August 9, 1900, a reunion of the alumni of the school was held in Bethel, when nearly one thousand of the former students and teachers assembled, from near and far, to do honor to "Old Gould's." At this time, the first step was taken toward raising a fund large enough to place the Academy on a strong financial basis. The effort met with a measure of success sufficient to greatly encourage those who have the financial interests of the school in charge, and it is hoped and believed that the sum then realized will be gradually increased, as the alumni become aware of the needs of the school, and are made to realize the broader work which financial assistance alone can make possible. An Alumni Association was formed, which promises to be of much help to the school, in turning the thoughts of former students back to their Alma Mater, thus forming a permanent channel by which much valuable assistance may be given to Gould's Academy.

Location.

One of the chief advantages of the school is its location. For healthfulness and inspiring surroundings, it cannot be surpassed. Bethel, a town of about twenty-five hundred inhabitants, is situated among the hills of Oxford county, Maine. No section of New England surpasses it in the beauty of its scenery. The mountains near by are detached members of the Appalachian system; the Androscoggin river winds slowly through the beautiful valley, just at the foot of the low hill upon which the village is built. The village is on the Grand Trunk Railway, in easy communication with Lewiston, Portland, and Boston.

The people of the town have high ideals, are refined and educated; they are loyal to the school and all its interests, and contribute in no small degree to the pleasure of student life at Bethel. The church and social relations are far ahead of the ordinary New England village. Scholars here, breathing the invigorating mountain air, free from the distracting influences of larger towns, have every incentive to high scholarly attainments.

General Information.

It is not desirable, perhaps not practicable, to make Gould's Academy a large institution ; but within its province, it aims to do its work well. Its present standards, its methods, its ideals are upon the lines the most earnest educators of the day are approving. Especial care is taken to secure and retain teachers of character and scholarship ; those whose habits and manners are such that the unconscious imitation of the student may not be detrimental to his future. The close attention to the individual needs of each pupil is a special feature of the school. Being under the almost constant oversight of their teachers, the students are trained to habits of regularity and application, and receive, in the fullest degree, the benefits which come from close personal association with their instructors.

Courses of Study.

There are two distinct courses of study, classical and academic. Each is of four years, and designed to be of equally high standard of requirements.

The classical course is designed for those who intend to continue their education in some of our higher institutions. The course may be varied to meet the requirements of any college. Special attention is given to securing good idiomatic English translations of the languages studied

Practice is also had in reading the ancient languages at sight, making ability to do this the real test of proficiency. But while facility in translating Greek and Latin is deemed of special importance in a student's preparation, still, the greatest good comes from the constant exercise of carefully deciding questions of grammatical construction, hence this is given careful attention throughout the entire course. Latin Composition is taken in connection with Cicero, Greek Composition in connection with Anabasis, Mythology in connection with Virgil.

The academic course is intended for those who want a good general education as a preparation for their life-work. This course, well completed, fits students for the higher technical or scientific schools, for teaching, or for practical every-day life. Special attention is paid to those studies, which, year by year, are more demanded from educated persons—notably, the English studies. The foreign languages, besides being studied for their own sake, are pursued with a view to a better understanding of our own English language.

Admission to College.

Arrangements have recently been perfected by which graduates of Gould's Academy may, in future, be admitted to nearly all the New England colleges upon certificate of the Principal. Students may be prepared for any college, and having completed such preparation, will be recommended to the Freshman Class of the college they desire to enter. It is believed that, with a curriculum approved by the best educators of the State, and with thoroughly qualified teachers at the head of its various departments, Gould's Academy can fit its students to compare favorably with those of any similar institution in New England.

Admission.

Candidates for admission to either course must be proficient in United States History and Geography, must have a good general knowledge of Arithmetic, and some acquaintance with English Grammar. Applicants for admission to advanced standing in either course must furnish satisfactory evidence that they have carefully performed the work previously done by the class they propose to enter. All students are strongly urged to enter upon a regular course ; but those who do not care to do this may take such studies as seem best adapted to their individual needs.

Promotions.

A definite standard of scholarship is required, and any student whose average rank for the year falls below this standard will not be promoted. The rank is obtained from daily recitations, from monthly written examinations, and from oral examinations held during the last week of each term. An average rank of at least seventy per cent. must be attained in order to secure promotion. A report of the standing of each pupil is sent to parent or guardian at the close of each term.

Physical Training.

The gymnasium is equipped for basket-ball, and is, at present, supplied with dumb bells, clubs, wands, military sticks, parallel and horizontal bars, chest weights, flying and traveling rings, etc. Needed apparatus will be added from time to time. Systematic gymnastic drills are given during the cold weather, when it becomes necessary to discontinue outdoor exercise. Tennis, basket-ball, base-ball, foot-ball, and other outdoor sports are encouraged during the spring and fall terms. The students have an Athletic Association, and the school maintains a good standing in general athletics.

Rhetorical Work.

Regular work in declamation and composition-writing is conducted throughout the course. Each student shall declaim not less than twice each term, except upon written request of parent or guardian. Such requests are rare, and are not, as a rule, for the best interest of the student. Students excused from declamations by request of parents are not eligible to a class part at graduation. Class work in elocution, free to the whole school, is required of all students throughout the entire course. The more advanced students are required to furnish original essays, while the younger re-produce from memory, in writing, selections read to them. A Prize Contest, open to the whole school, takes place at the close of the winter term, at which prizes are offered for excellence in declamation and recitation.

Prizes.

Prizes have been awarded as follows during the past year: Ladies' first prize for excellence in declamation, to Agnes L. Barton, second, to Edith R. Hastings. Gentlemen's first prize for excellence in declamation, to Everett D. Brown, second, to Fenwicke L. Holmes.

Parliamentary Law.

A class in Parliamentary Law will be conducted by the Principal during at least one term of the year. In this class, pupils are taught, by actual practice, the laws and principles of parliamentary usage; they are led, by gradual degrees, to take part in impromptu speech-making, and, from time to time, conduct debates on current topics. The object is to stimulate self-possession, aid facility of thought and expression, and teach the manner of conducting a public meeting "decently and in order."

Library.

The Academy Library is well supplied with books of reference, standard works of literature, history and biography. It contains several hundred volumes, nearly all selected with special reference to utility in school work. The library is open daily for the consultation and withdrawal of books, and access may be had at any time to the best cyclopedias, dictionaries and gazeteers as aids to study. The following books have recently been added to the reference library: Columbian Cyclopedia, (forty volumes,)

Chambers' Cyclopedia of English Literature, (four volumes,) Standard Dictionary, (two volumes,) Lippincott's Biographical Dictionary, Lippincott's Gazeteer of the World, Six Thousand Years of History, (ten volumes,) Literature of All Nations, (ten volumes,) Bulfinch's Mythology, (three volumes,) Gardiner's Latin Lexicon, Greek, Latin, French, and German dictionaries. In addition to the above, about forty volumes have been added to the general library during the past year.

Reading-Room.

The Reading-Room is pleasantly located, adjoining the main study-room. It is supplied with daily and weekly newspapers, educational journals, and the standard monthly magazines and reviews. To stimulate a desire for knowledge of what is going on in the world around us, a daily bulletin is prepared by the students, and a few moments each morning are devoted to the discussion of current events.

Cabinet.

The Cabinet contains one of the best collections of minerals and fossils to be found in any secondary school in Maine. These are arranged in cases and catalogued, making them a valuable aid in the study of Geology and Mineralogy. The Cabinet also has a fine collection of eggs (775 specimens) from all parts of the world. This is the Mrs. Jacob Horton collection, and has been loaned to the Academy for ten years. There are, also, chemical and physical apparatus, globes, charts, Yaggy's Anatomical Study, etc.

Academy Herald.

The HERALD is published by the students once each term, and is devoted to the interests of the school in general. Its chief object is to encourage the students to literary effort, and to keep the alumni and the general public in touch with the school.

Government and Discipline.

The object of the school government and regulations is the foundation of systematic habits of study, good manners, and correct morals. The school must depend largely upon the reason and judgment of its students to promote a high standard of manliness and womanliness, hence no pains are spared to cultivate a keen sense of propriety and a high and clear conception of honor. Only those students who are willing to conform to the wishes of their teachers, and make their school work of first importance are wanted, and those whose work or conduct continue unsatisfactory, after due admonition, will be dismissed from the school.

Regulations.

During the daily sessions, students study at the Academy under the eye of the Principal. Evening study hours begin at 7:30, and students are expected to be in their rooms from that time until the hour of retiring. Students are expected to attend church regularly on the Sabbath, to be punctual and regular in attendance upon all the school exercises, and to conduct themselves properly at all times. The use of intoxicating liquors, tobacco, profane or vulgar language is forbidden. Continuous attendance is urged upon all. It is important that every student be present the first, and remain until the last day of the term. Parents are urgently requested to visit the school and to correspond with the teachers relative to their children.
